Wherever You Want to Go, THE ATLANTA BELTLINE TAKES YOU THERE

Getting around Atlanta has never been easier.

The Atlanta BeltLine project will feature a new transit system, multi-use trails, greenspace, and affordable housing along a 22-mile loop of old rail lines encircling the urban core. It will connect neighborhoods, improve travel and mobility options, spur economic development, offer unprecedented exposure to unique public art installations, and elevate the overall quality of life in the city. Explore the BeltLine’s completed parks and trails—and envision what’s to come—using the convenient centerfold tear-out map in this booklet.

Great Ways to Traverse ATLANTA’S SOUTHEAST SIDE

Moving ahead with more connections.

The Eastside Trail is the first section of multi-use trail to be completed in the old railroad corridor and runs 3 miles from Midtown Atlanta to Memorial Drive. The BeltLine corridor crosses I-20 and transitions into the Southside Interim Trail. While design continues for this segment, the trail itself is open in an unpaved state. This southeastern segment brings the BeltLine into historic Atlanta communities and in close proximity to Grant Park and Zoo Atlanta.

When complete, Boulevard Crossing Park will include 20+ acres of greenspace. The existing park includes soccer fields. Phase II is in design.

D.H. Stanton Park includes a playground, splashpad and athletic fields.

The 4-mile multi-use Southside Trail corridor connects the Westside and Eastside Trails.

A Bold Vision Moving Forward
IN SOUTHWEST ATLANTA

A historic destination with exciting new connectivity.

The southwest map includes portions of the 3-mile Westside Trail, which extends south from Washington Park to University Avenue. It features the Southwest Connector Trail, which extends past Westview Cemetery to a 54-acre nature preserve with additional trails. It also contains a portion of the Southside Interim Trail, which begins just south of the Atlanta BeltLine Urban Farm.

The Southside Trail runs east, adjacent to the former Pittsburgh Yards, which is expected to be a vibrant, living-wage job ecosystem that clusters a range of businesses together, including industrial, office and administrative, artistic and creative enterprises. Plans also continue for Murphy Crossing on the Westside Trail, an ambitious mixed-use development and greenspace planned for the former site of the state farmer’s market.

Endless ways for Atlanta to make lasting connections.

The Atlanta BeltLine is a dynamic and transformative project featuring a new transit system, multi-use trails, greenspace, and affordable workforce housing along a 22-mile loop of old rail lines that encircle the urban core. It will better connect neighborhoods, improve travel and mobility options, spur economic development, offer unprecedented exposure to unique public art installations, and elevate the overall quality of life in the city.
Adventure Awaits on
ATLANTA’S HISTORIC WESTSIDE

Explore a defining destination with deep local roots.

Home to some of the City’s oldest and most historic neighborhoods, the westside segment includes a portion of the 3-mile Westside Trail, which runs north from University Avenue to Washington Park, a westside gem that is walking distance from the Ashby MARTA station. Plans for trail development north of Washington Park, through Maddox Park and to West Marietta Street are underway.

The PATH Foundation is constructing the 7-mile Proctor Creek Greenway, which will connect to the Chattahoochee River and Silver Comet Trail.

Westside Park at Bellwood Quarry will exceed Piedmont Park as one of Atlanta’s largest greenspaces at over 300 acres. It will open in phases, with the initial phase in development.

Scenic Beauty Intertwined with Industrial Energy

Major crosstown connections and links to regional path networks.

Much of the northside segment of the Atlanta BeltLine’s corridor is active rail, and thus trail and transit will be built in independent corridors along these areas. The segment includes the Northside Trail, a beautiful one-mile trek through Tanyard Creek Park, and a spur trail to Bitsy Tennis Center and Bobby Jones Golf Course. In the future, the BeltLine will connect to PATH 400 and the Peachtree Creek Greenway near the Lindbergh MARTA station.

The Northeast Interim Trail extends from Lindbergh MARTA station to Armour Yards and past Ansley Golf Club. This area of the city has long been divided by interstates, rail lines and major roadways. The BeltLine provides a unique opportunity to reconnect these neighborhoods in Northwest and Northeast Atlanta, while also providing links to other regional pathways and greenspace projects.
The Bustling Eastside Showcases ATLANTA’S LIMITLESS POTENTIAL

The BeltLine’s busiest segment draws visitors from across the globe.

The eastside segment includes most of the Eastside Trail, which extends south from Piedmont Park to Memorial Drive. The Northeast Interim Trail extends north from Piedmont Park, past Ansley Mall and continues up to Armour Yards beyond the Buford-Spring Connector.

The developed Eastside Trail is the most-visited segment of the corridor, and passes such notable destinations as Ponce City Market, Historic Fourth Ward Park and the Historic Fourth Ward Skatepark.

Historic Fourth Ward Park is a 17-acre park that includes a splashpad, playground, event lawns, outdoor theater and 2-acre loke with waterfalls.

Historic Fourth Ward Skatepark features a playground, athletic fields, ample greenspace for large gatherings, as well as Atlanta’s premier skatepark.

Above: Drawing 70,000+ participants in 2018, the Eastside Trail’s Lantern Parade is one of Atlanta’s iconic fall events.
"The Atlanta BeltLine is about connection. It is a celebration of what’s great about Atlanta."
