A Note About Residential Transitions

This map uses broad land use categories that do not show the traditional variances and height planes required by the Zoning Ordinance. When new development abuts a less intense residential district, it must step down in height and provide landscaping between the two. The amount and length of the step down varies by zoning district.